Introduction

Donbass observed creeping escalation of the conflict. Compared to other periods of war - it is a relatively average level of daily attacks in the measurement. Negotiations on the settlement of the conflict in eastern Ukraine is clearly intensified. Once again, with his "shuttle " mediation mission US Assistant Secretary of State Victoria Nuland. In June, held a foreign debut of Vladimir Groisman at the head of government.

Some European elites want reconciliation with Russia, even at the expense of concessions on the Ukrainian question. And all this against the background of Brexit.

The main decision of the Verkhovna Rada in June, was the adoption of the judicial reform bills, including the relevant constitutional amendments.

In June began the reevaluation of the political image of Nadiya Savchenko. Her scandalous resonance statements (in particular, the need to direct talks with the leaders of the separatist republics and others) caused many at first puzzled, then a flurry of accusations against her. Starts affect lack of political experience and necessary knowledge, as well as its excessive straightforwardness.

Poland says lifting Russia sanctions now would weaken EU authority, 01.06.2016

The European Union must not ease sanctions on Russia until the so-called Minsk peace agreement is fully implemented, as this would weaken the bloc's position in its relations with Moscow, Poland's Deputy Foreign Minister Konrad Szymanski told.

Szymanski's comments come amid suggestions that the EU may begin to ease its sanctions on Russia later this year. While diplomats in Brussels expect the 28-nation bloc to extend the sanctions, which were introduced over Moscow's role in the conflict in Ukraine and expire in July, they also say that intensifying high-level contacts with Russia two years after it annexed Crimea from Ukraine may signal a thaw. European Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker's plans to meet President Vladimir Putin in June in Russia. Juncker wrote to Putin in November suggesting closer trade ties between the EU and the Russian-led Eurasian Economic Union. Moscow may have also given EU states advocating sanctions relief more arguments by last week returning to Kiev jailed Ukrainian military pilot Nadezhda Savchenko in a prisoner exchange welcomed by Western politicians.

Merkel sees no reason to roll back Russia sanctions: spokeswoman, 01.06.2016

German Chancellor Angela Merkel sees no reason at all now to roll back sanctions against Russia in the Ukraine crisis, a government spokeswoman said on Wednesday.

German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier said on Tuesday some EU states were skeptical about extending sanctions against Russia over the Ukraine crisis and it was unclear if the 28-nation bloc would decide to renew them. "I can only tell you that the Chancellor is in talks with the Foreign Minister and that both agree that the Minsk peace process needs to be continued and the chancellor currently sees no reason at all for rolling back the sanctions," government spokeswoman Christiane Wirtz told a regular news conference. A Foreign Ministry spokesman added Steinmeier's comments were not inconsistent with the government's stance in the Ukraine crisis and the final declaration of G7 leaders in Japan.

Savchenko: West could not but tighten anti-Russia sanctions, 02.06.2016

Ukrainian Member of Parliament Nadia Savchenko says that the West should tighten anti-Russian sanctions instead of mulling the possibility of softening them, according to Deutsche Welle's Russian-language service. It is necessary to exert "massive economic and political pressure" on RF President Vladimir Putin, Savchenko said. "I am so angry that Ukrainian soldiers die while discussions how to ease the sanctions have already started in Germany," she said. "I think the world should realize in the end that Putin's craving will never be satisfied. He wants to capture new regions and countries, again and again," she said.

Turchynov unveils losses of National Guard in Donbas war, 02.06.2016

We have paid a very high price for this – 177 guardsmen were killed and 737 wounded," Turchynov said during an official ceremony of the transfer of the battle flag to the fourth operational rapid response brigade of the National Guard of Ukraine. As reported earlier, 42 Ukrainian troops have been killed and another 350 were wounded in eastern Ukraine since the beginning of 2016. No cold war between West, Russia; NATO seeks no confrontation: Stoltenberg, 02.06.2016

Answering the reporter's question on how he would characterize the relationship that the Alliance has with Russia, the NATO chief said: "We are not in a new cold war but we are neither in the strategic partnership we tried to develop with Russia after the end of the Cold War." "What we see is a more assertive Russia, we don't see any imminent threat against any NATO ally but we see a Russia which over a long period of time has invested heavily in defense capabilities, in modernizing their armed forces and we have seen a Russia which has been willing to use military force to change borders in Europe for the first time since the end of the Second World War with the illegal annexation of Crimea," said Stoltenberg. "And therefore NATO has to respond and that's exactly what we are doing and we are responding partly by implementing the biggest reinforcement to our collective defense since the end of the Cold War both with increased readiness and preparedness of our forces."

Georgia Defense Minister: Russia molding new world order, serious response needed, 03.06.2016

"I think that Europe is in danger today as well as the global security. After Crimea there was serious security challenge to the entire world not to just Europe. There is a country out there that is setting up new international law, that is creating new international order, that is in the process of revising everything that civilized world had agreed about after the II World War. There is a need for a very serious response to it. What we are seeing today is the world that basically follows the actions of Kremlin. We are all in a kind of reactive mode. We react as they act and it is troubling. I think the Warsaw Summit in July constitutes a great opportunity for everybody to prove that NATO is united and that's extremely important to show to everybody and to make sure that nobody has an idea that there is a separate game Russia has with different countries. So, the unity of NATO will be number one issue as we see it for the Warsaw Summit. Number two is to show that there is a positive agenda, that there is a plan, there is road map that clearly shows even bigger deterrence power on the side of countries neighboring Russia. That clearly shows that NATO does everything possible for peace and for preventing any further confrontation. Number three I think this is a time for courageous decision-making. I would I see Warsaw Summit as an opportunity for NATO to prove to Russia that it is in charge of its own decision-making and Russia does not have a veto power on any decisions coming out of Brussels or Warsaw in this case, being the host of the Summit, and to show that Europe being free and safe is not limited to Article 5 boundaries. That world today is not involved with putting up a new Berlin Wall or putting up a new Iron Curtain at this time on Article 5 boundaries and everybody else is left for Russia as its backyard to deal with the issues and to sort out the problems themselves. This is how I would see things developing from now to July", outlined Tinatin Khidasheli.

Poroshenko insists that agreement was reached in 'Normandy format' on sending OSCE police mission to Donbas, 03.06.2016

"Today we have a serious diplomatic success because we have reached an agreement on sending this mission not only in the "Normandy format," on the top level, but our German partners began a discussion on the issue of sending a police mission [to eastern Ukraine] already in Vienna under German chairmanship [in the OSCE]," Poroshenko said. He emphasized that these events give him reason to be cautiously optimistic, "and that became a basis for me to say that we may complete this process in 2016." "Unfortunately, we lost three months after that statement, but the process is going on very actively," he said.

In the meantime, the Kremlin has denied Ukraine's allegations that Russian President Vladimir Putin gave his consent to the deployment in Donbas of some armed police mission of the OSCE in "Normandy Four" contacts.

McCain Concerned Obama Administration 'Selectively' Enforcing Sanctions on Russia, 05.06.2016

McCain suggested that the Obama administration is giving special treatment to a Russian rocket manufacturer Roscosmos as the US currently purchases Russian RD-180 rocket engines from the manufacturer, known as NPO Energomash, to use during national security space launches. "I write to express my concern with the appearance of selective enforcement of sanctions imposed in response to the invasion of Crimea by the Russian Federation," McCain wrote. "I am particularly troubled that, today, the Administration is allowing for the procurement of rocket engines for military space launches that result in the payment of money to a Russian state-owned corporation controlled by officers and directors who have been individually sanctioned in connection with the invasion."

Savchenko insists on direct contact with "DPR", "LPR": "We need to talk beyond Minsk process", 07.06.2016

Batkivshchyna MP Nadiia Savchenko calls for direct talks with the leaders of the so-called "LPR" and "DPR", bypassing the Minsk agreements. In phone conversation with Nadiia Savchenko, who is currently visiting Ukraine's east, she stressed that the Minsk agreements can not stop the war but they stopped the barrage. When asked how to resolve the situation in the Donbas, she suggested three steps. In particular, she called for seeking mutual understanding and noted the importance of mutual forgiveness. She added that both Chechen and Dagestani scenarios are unsuitable for the Donbas as Ukraine needs to refrain from carnage. "There are three steps. First, the sanctions against Russia should be extended. as it has not yet realized it has to withdraw. Second, we should launch direct, internal talks beyond the Minsk agreements with the "DPR" and "LPR", excluding any third or fourth party," the deputy stressed.

Nuland: Russia Feeling 'Pain' Of U.S. Sanctions, 08.06.2016

Victoria Nuland, assistant secretary of state for European and Eurasian Affairs, also told lawmakers on June 7 that Moscow remained in violation or "out of compliance with" some major arms-control treaties, including the 1987 Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty, known as the INF. Coming just weeks before an important NATO summit in Warsaw, Nuland's comments before a Senate committee gave some indication of what that summit's agenda will include, with Russian military maneuvers in Eastern Europe and the Middle East likely to take center stage. That summit will be preceded by a meeting of European Union leaders in Brussels, where officials are expected to renew sanctions against Russia that were imposed alongside analogous U.S. measures following Moscow's forcible annexation of Ukraine's Crimea Peninsula in 2014.

Pyatt: World community has not enough info on Russia ' s role in Donbas war, 09.06.2016

USA Ambassador to Ukraine Geoffrey Pyatt has emphasized that the global community is not completely knowledgeable about the role of Russia in the war in Donbas. " I assume a huge component of the Kremlin's method from the beginning of this aggressiveness has been to see just how much they could escape without prompting a global response. That's why they sent out the "little eco-friendly males" right into Crimea. It had not been to conceal it from the USA' federal government, from our knowledge. We had an extremely clear image of just what Russia was doing. It was to develop complication. The purpose of this Russian educational war is not to win the disagreement– it's to win the war. As we state they have actually weaponized details," Pyatt claimed. I do not assume Americans referred to as high as they must around just what this nation has undergone over the previous 2 years as well as 3 months." " Everyone recognizes the tale of the Buk rocket as well as MH17, a great deal of individuals recognize the tale of the Donetsk flight terminal. I do not assume there is enough expertise in the United States or in Europe of just what Russia proceeds to do. Russia remains to supply command as well as control as well as knowledge for the militaries of the supposed 'DNR' as well as 'LNR.' The Russia remains to revolve soldiers as well as to provide brand-new ammo as well as devices," he claimed.

Russian political scientist says when Kremlin to face serious internal problems, 10.06.2016

Asked whether the elections in Russia will affect the Kremlin's policy, the analyst said: "Whether they influence it or not, there is no money. So, as Dmitry Medvedev said: 'Hold on there!' The economic situation before the parliamentary elections is still bearable. To my mind, the presidential elections in 2018 will be more problematic. If the economy does not start to grow in a year, and I can't see why it should, then 2018 will be a problem year." According to Oreshkin, as of today, the very election process is more dangerous for the Kremlin than its outcome. "The Duma elections-2016 will not be a problem. In fact, the parliamentary elections cannot be a problem, because it's not of particular importance, what the Duma composition will be. It is clear that the United Russia Party will lose 10-15%, but it will compensate for the loss will single-mandate constituencies: those, who stripped of a shirt of the United Russia Party and sported another one with an "Independent candidate" spelled on it," Oreshkin said.

"Yes, we see no progress in the Minsk talks, and we see an increase in violence and ceasefire violations. We see more problems than solutions. However, [the Minsk agreement] is the only structure we've got for the discussion of future solutions to what has unfortunately happened in the east of Ukraine to millions of Ukrainians who have become hostages of that conflict," Tombinski said at an open meeting with the public entitled "Laying the Foundation of Ukraine's Future" in Kyiv on Friday. AP Interview: Savchenko calls for early elections in Ukraine, 10.06.2016

Savchenko, 35, who has become a national icon in Ukraine after spending two years in a Russian prison, told The Associated Press that the "Ukrainian people deserve a better government that they now have." She said that the Ukrainian government has failed public expectations raised by the ouster of the country's former Moscow-friendly president, Viktor Yanukovich, who was driven from power in February 2014 after months of massive street protests on Kiev's main square, the Maidan. "The longer this dishonorable government leads us, the further back toward a precipice it will drive us," Savchenko said, speaking with emphasis. "People believed in it after the Maidan; they gave a big credit of trust to the government, which it has failed."

Poroshenko says general mobilization plan must be "polished" to be ready for Russia's full-scale invasion, 14.06.2016

"In case of aggression, the issue of territorial defense must be thoroughly examined with consideration of the experience of the last two years," the Head of State said, emphasizing the need to guard important state objects deep in the rear of the Ukrainian territory. "Similarly, in case of a full-scale invasion, a plan of general mobilization and country's operation under martial law must be polished," said Poroshenko. The fact that we do not announce general mobilization proves that the campaign of building a contract army is efficient," the Ukrainian president said. He instructed to draft decisions following the meeting and submit them for consideration by the NSDC and Government. "State defense is a task of not only the President and General Staff, but also every citizen of Ukraine," the president said.

Chubarov: Russia turns Crimea into strong military base, 15.06.2016

"Russia has been pursuing the policy that is already obvious to all of us: it has been turning the Crimean peninsula into a powerful military base on the southern flank of NATO. Russia has started systematically ousting disloyal people from Crimea," he said at a meeting of the Ukraine-NATO Interparliamentary Council in Kyiv on Wednesday. According to Chubarov, Russia creates conditions that force people to leave their own land. "The displacement of the Crimean Tatars is an obvious goal and tasks of the occupying authorities," he said. In this context, the Crimean Tatars and Ukrainian politicians cannot but disagree that the return of Crimea is premature, Chubarov said.

NATO Chief Demands Russia Withdraw From Ukraine, 15.06.2016

NATO chief Jens Stoltenberg has called on Russia to withdraw its forces and military equipment from Ukraine and to stop supporting separatists in eastern Ukraine. Stoltenberg made his comments on June 15 after a meeting of NATO defense ministers in Brussels that was also attended by Ukrainian Defense Minister Stepan Poltorak.

Russian officials have repeatedly denied sending troops or military hardware to Ukraine, despite evidence to the contrary. Stoltenberg said the alliance will continue to stand by the Ukrainian government and will never recognize Russia's 2014 "illegal and illegitimate annexation of [the Ukrainian peninsula of] Crimea." He added that in response to Russian military actions in Ukraine, NATO has "stepped up its support for Ukraine."

U.S. Official Confident EU Will Continue To Back Russia Sanctions, 16.06.2016

The U.S. State Department's chief sanctions-policy coordinator is confident the European Union will maintain its travel and economic restrictions against Russia until Moscow fulfills the terms of a peace agreement to end the conflict in eastern Ukraine.

Daniel Fried on June 16 called costs to the West of sanctions "the price" of combating "Russian aggression." The United States and European Union imposed sanctions on Russia for its seizure of Crimea in March 2014 and its backing of armed separatism in eastern Ukraine, leaving President Vladimir Putin internationally isolated.

E.U. to extend anti-Russia sanctions for 6 more months at least - German MEP, 18.06.2017

Elmar Brok, Chairman the Committee on Foreign Affairs in the European Parliament, rules out the possibility of anti-Russian sanctions being eased in the near-term outlook, Deutsche Welle Ukrainian news service reported referring to Brok's interview with Neue Osnabrücker Zeitung. German MEP stressed that the extension of sanctions for another six months was "out of the question." The gradual easing of sanctions is possible only "when there will be some progress in the peace process," according to Brok.

NATO's Stoltenberg: EU sanctions on Russia should remain, 20.06.2016

"My assessment is that one should not remove the economic sanctions before Russia has changed its behavior. I believe there is a broad agreement about this in the EU," Stoltenberg said in an interview. German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier was quoted on Sunday as saying the EU should gradually phase out the sanctions if there is substantial progress in the peace process and if Russia showed it was doing its part in implementing the Minsk peace plan for Ukraine. Steinmeier was quoted in a separate article as saying that NATO exercises in eastern Europe could worsen tensions with Russia, warning against what he called "sabre-rattling and shrill war cries." Stoltenberg told the Sueddeutsche Zeitung newspaper in Germany that NATO was actively seeking to avoid an escalation with Russia, while standing firm against its aggressive behavior.

Merkel insists Russia sanctions tied to Minsk accord, 20.06.2016

"The sanctions can be removed as soon as Russia fulfills these obligations," spokesman Steffen Seibert told a regular government news conference, reiterating the stance agreed at a meeting of the Group of Seven economic powers last month.

"However, we are ready to take further restrictive measures to increase the costs for Russia, should its actions make this necessary," he added. German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier was quoted on Sunday as saying the European Union should gradually phase out sanctions imposed against Russia over the Ukraine crisis if there is substantial progress in the peace process.

Biden: Beating corruption in Ukraine to take away Russia's political weapon, 21.06.2016

"Our approach [to Russia], if appropriately managed, we mark by a complex mix of enhanced deterrence, strategic stability and, yes, necessary cooperation," said Biden, comparing such approach to the way Washington builds relations with China, according to the report. "With our partners and allies, particularly in Europe, we've imposed real cost on Russia for its absolutely outward aggression towards Ukraine. Russia must uphold its commitments under the Minsk agreement. And there can be no backing away from that. And sanctions should remain until they [Russians] do," said the U.S. vice president. Biden also noted the assistance Ukraine has been receiving to implement vital economic reforms and rooting out corruption.

Ex-NATO chief: Frozen conflict in Donbas to have devastating effect, 21.06.2016

A frozen conflict in Donbas would become for Russia a means to hinder European aspirations of Ukraine and other neighboring countries. If this happens, it will seriously affect Ukraine, former NATO Secretary-General Anders Fogh Rasmussen said. All smoldering or frozen conflicts are part of Russia's general strategy said Rasmussen, adding that the Kremlin wants to keep its neighbors weak and dependent on Moscow, as much as possible. Therefore, he believes that the transformation of the situation in the Donbas into a smoldering or frozen conflict will have serious and devastating effects. Rasmussen has noted that it is much more than just about Ukraine. Similar things can be witnessed in Transnistria, Abkhazia, South Ossetia, and Nagorno-Karabakh, according to him.

Dekanoidze explains impossibility of complete eradication of police corruption, 21.06.2016

'Unfortunately, I should admit that we still cannot eradicate all the corruption components. First of all this is because of motivation that our cops simply do not possess. Secondly, it's because of technical equipment: no police officer feels himself worthy; there are no uniforms, no cars and so on. Thirdly, there is no integrity in the judicial system that is necessary to understand that everyone started with an ordinary employee and experienced great mental transformation. Yes, we are working in a new way. And working in a new way means that not only the police but the entire law enforcement system should work in a new way,' Dekanoidze said.

Savchenko tells PACE when Russia to get weary of waging war with Ukraine, 21.06.2016

"One of the advantages of the 'one in power' system is a pyramid. Russia's biggest reserve is not gold, diamonds, oil or gas, but its people, unfortunately. Authorities have no fear of killing people and sending them to their deaths. And therefore, they [authorities] will have this reserve at their disposal as long as people's consciousness remains low," Savchenko said in Strasbourg during the roundtable discussions organized by the PACE. Savchenko expressed hope that "there is a potential for enlightenment and understanding on the part of the people." "There is not much reserve that is left. If people stand up and stop feeling intimidated it means that Russia has exhausted its reserve," Savchenko said.

Rada speaks about negative prospects for Ukraine after UK referendum, 24.06.2016

"The EU is hardly passing a test on migration crisis. Europe is covered by a tsunami of euroscepticism, there is growing support for radical and populist parties. Could this delay the visa-free regime for Ukraine? Yes, unfortunately," Gerashchenko wrote. Serious internal problems "kill the ratings of all current EU leaders, force them to focus on the situation within the EU, turning a blind eye to everything that is happening beyond." Gerashchenko stresses that a weakened and divided Europe, split between skeptics and optimists, a Europe that is afraid of its tomorrow, is the Kremlin's sweetest dream. She is convinced, whatever the consequences of the British referendum for the EU – it is not a reason for Ukraine to give up.

Bishop seeks briefing on Brexit, 26.06.2016

Australia is negotiating with the EU on the possible terms of a free-trade agreement, but could open talks with Britain on a bilateral deal. Ms Bishop said Australia was concerned that a weakened EU would not have any impact on how the Middle East and Ukraine situations are being handled. "There are strategic concerns and we will continue to work very closely with both the European Union and with Great Britain to secure our national security," she said. Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull told the coalition launch the Brexit had caused "shock waves" and was a reminder of volatility in the global economy. "We will need to renegotiate vital trade deals with Europe and with Britain," he said. Labor foreign affairs spokesman Tanya Plibersek said the British vote pointed to "middle-class and working class voters feeling left behind". "What we've seen in Britain, what we've seen in the US, and sadly what we've seen in Australia too, is a growing wealth gap," she said.

Russian diplomat: "Sooner or later, Russia will have to apologize to Ukraine and compensate for damages inflicted", 29.06.2016

Ex-Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs of Russia (1991-1993), Ambassador Georgiy Kunadze in an interview has told about similarities in the Kremlin's decisions to deploy troops in Afghanistan in 1979 and in Ukraine in 2014, and why the Russian special operations in Crimea and Donbas were in fact failures. Not everybody in Russia supports the invasion of Ukraine and annexation of the Ukrainian territory. However, only few dare to speak up voicing their opposition to the Kremlin's aggressive policy. Former Deputy Foreign Minister of Russia (1991-1993), Ambassador Georgiy Kunadze believes that the issue of the return of the occupied territories depends on the political will of the Russian leadership. If a task is set to hand back to the rightful owner the seized land, the diplomats will be able immediately to explain why this should be done. However, much will depend on how quickly the Russian public can recover from this "Great Empire" psychosis that has engulfed millions.

OSCE considers armed police mission to Donbas amid violence escalation, 03.06.2016

The violence in eastern Ukraine is rising every day. OSCE monitors, stationed in the conflict areas, register dozens of explosions and shooting incidents on some days, hundreds on the other. On May 24 Kyiv reported seven Ukrainian soldiers were killed in the conflict zone. Another five died several days later. The warring sides are getting closer and closer to each other, in a blow to the Minsk agreements, and it seems the trigger-happy parties do not get disciplined enough. As a result, more hotspots are appearing in Donbas, in addition to heavy fighting near Avdiivka and Yasynuvata.

"We expect when we report violations that the sides will follow up on our reports, and the absence of these followups will trigger more violence. A new flashpoint is emerging in the area of Dokuchaevsk (Donetsk region), where four civilians tragically died a few weeks ago," Deputy Chief of the OSCE SMM to Ukraine Alexander Hug says in an interview.

UN Sees Threat of Protracted War in East Ukraine Conflict, 05.06.2016

High Commissioner for Human Rights in Geneva said the situation in eastern Ukraine remains volatile two years into the war between Russian-backed armed separatists and the government. The latest U.N. figures show nearly 9,400 people have been killed and more than 21,500 others wounded since the conflict began in mid-April 2014. U.N. monitors said active fighting has decreased; but, they warn, the Minsk peace agreement is fragile and the situation could develop into a protracted conflict or escalate again. They said both scenarios would have dire consequences for the civilian population and be harmful to human rights for many years.

"We never had the desire or deliberate intention of shooting down the Russian Federation's plane," Mr Erdogan said. The letter went on to say that the Turkish side "undertook much effort at great risk to retrieve the Russian pilot's body from the Syrian opposition and bring it back to Turkey, where pre-burial procedures were carried out in accordance with religious and military procedures. We performed this work at a level worthy of our two countries' relations. I once again express my sympathy and profound condolences to the family of the Russian pilot who was killed and I am saying: "Excuse us." I share their grief with all my heart. Russia deploys troops westward as standoff with NATO deepens, 08.06.2016

Russia is building an army base near its border with Ukraine, the latest in a chain of new military sites along what the Kremlin sees as its frontline in a growing confrontation with NATO. While there have been no clashes between the former Cold War rivals, Russia is building up forces on its western frontiers at a time when the NATO alliance is staging major military exercises and increasing deployments on its eastern flank. A Reuters reporter who visited the Russian town of Klinty, about 50 km (30 miles) from Ukraine, saw a makeshift army camp, large numbers of newly-arrived servicemen and military vehicles. Two soldiers in camouflage gear who were manning a checkpoint in a forest turned the reporter away, saying they were guarding a "special military site".

PROSECUTOR: MH17 INVESTIGATION GOING WELL, 30.06.2015

The criminal investigation into the cause of the disaster with flight MH17 in eastern Ukraine is going well, according to chief prosecutor Fred Westerbeke.

The chief prosecutor of the Public Prosecutor's national office said on Tuesday that though the investigators haven't reached the point of "formally" identifying suspects, they have a group of potential suspects in view, NU reports. "We are getting closer to legal and convincing evidence," he said. According to the Public Prosecutor, the most likely scenario is that the Malaysian Airlines airplane was shot down by a BUK-missile. But that is not the only scenario that the Prosecutor is looking at. Experts are busy investigating alternative scenarios in order to substantiate or exclude them.

The families of the 298 victims were also informed of the status of the investigation on Tuesday.
